Comics , tv and movies have played down superhuman abilities but fans still love to fantasize about using incredible superpowers like flight and telepathy and etc…

But if I could have a superpower for one day I would choose omnificence

Also called absolute creation ,almighty creation, hands of God. The question is that what is it ?

Omnificence is creating all things, in this ability users have this unlimited ability to create absolutely anything imaginable. Their creation power knows no bounds they can create from nothing .

Transform something from something else , resurrect a dead person , replicate anything , and basically create anything they want on an infinite scale.

I chose this power because it is for twenty four hours but the created are forever and this power supports several other powers .

If I had this power I would help people and Earth for example machine or something for pollution and diseases and a book transforms people to get along better . and I would create enough wealth for the rest of my life and travelling around the world …

Another superpower that I really life it is mind control . in this ability user can control the minds of others including their thoughts ,perceptions , behaviors , movements , memories , emotions and personality. Depending on the user's skill and power , this can be like hypnotize , and user maybe able to control the mind of multiple people simultaneously .

If I had this power I would control statesmen , especially Iran’s goverment , I would stop the thefts and hijab and I would give money to the poor, and I would bring back colored cars and many other things…

Another one that is very interesting is apace-time Manipulation

The user is able to control and harness the forces and energies of the world this power covers a wide range of abilities and is often considered one of the most powerful and broad abilities in any setting

The user can also control , change and influence the fundamental forces and energies that govern the universe . the user can use these forces to perform all kinds of destructive constructive feats.

Generally we can’t ger these powers and these are fictitious and imaginary

But I think we can live in a such a way that we don’t need superpowers .